

Licence Terms DroneStock – 2026 (V4)

These Licence Terms form an integral part of the General Terms and Conditions of DroneStock, a trading name of BumbleB.nu B.V., Chamber of Commerce number 94135363.

In the event of a conflict with the General Terms and Conditions concerning the content or scope of the right of use, these Licence Terms prevail. A separate written bespoke or Enterprise Agreement prevails only to the extent that it expressly deviates from these Licence Terms.

A purchase is subject to the Licence Terms applicable when that purchase agreement was concluded. A later change to these terms, prices or licensing models does not automatically change a Licence already granted. Existing arrangements and statutory rights continue to apply.

1. Grant of the Licence

After payment in full, the Customer receives a:

- non-exclusive
- non-transferable
- non-sublicensable, except for limited use by an End Customer in accordance with Article 3
- worldwide
- perpetual licence to use the purchased Content in accordance with these terms.

Copyright and other intellectual property rights in the Content are not transferred. The Customer acquires only the agreed right of use.

The Licence applies to the natural or legal person who purchased the Content. Other legal persons, including group companies, do not automatically acquire an independent right of use. Article 3 applies to persons working on behalf of the Customer and to end products for an End Customer.

The standard licence is royalty-free: no additional licence fee per use is payable for use within the limits of this Licence. The Licence applies for an indefinite period, subject to legally valid termination in accordance with Article 12.

A higher selling price, Premium Pricing or volume discount does not automatically extend the rights of use.

2. Permitted use

Within the limits of this Licence, the following are permitted:

- commercial and private use;
- use on websites, social media and digital channels;
- use in advertisements, online and in print;
- use in audiovisual productions;
- use in presentations and marketing materials;
- use in editorial publications, subject to Article 7.

The Customer may use Content for their own activities. Where the Customer acts as an agency, producer or other contractor, the Customer may also incorporate Content in an end product for a client, referred to here as the End Customer. The restrictions in Article 3 apply.

This Article does not grant a right to resell, distribute or relicense Content as a standalone stock file.

3. Use by third parties on behalf of the Customer

The Customer may make Content available to employees and engaged contractors who process it solely on behalf of and for the benefit of the Customer. They acquire no independent right of use. The Customer ensures that they comply with applicable restrictions and do not use the Content for other purposes.

The Customer may incorporate Content in an end product for an End Customer, such as a corporate film, advertisement, presentation or website. An end product is a production or communication of which the Content forms a part; offering only a stock file, download link or collection of stock files does not constitute an end product.

The End Customer may use and publish the delivered end product within the limits of this Licence. This grants the End Customer a right to use the Content solely as part of that end product, not an independent licence to the original DroneStock file.

The original DroneStock file must not be delivered to the End Customer as a standalone file. For websites and other digital end products, technically necessary display files may form part of delivery. They must not be offered as independent stock material or reused outside the end product.

If the End Customer wishes to edit the Content independently or use it for other productions, their own Licence or a separate written arrangement with DroneStock is required.

The Customer remains responsible for compliance when creating and delivering the end product and informs the End Customer of these restrictions on use.

4. Editing Content

Editing, cropping, trimming, colour correction and combining with other materials are permitted within the authorised use.

In doing so, the Customer must not infringe moral rights or other third-party rights, cause unlawful reputational harm or create a misleading impression of depicted persons, locations or events.

An edit or altered context must not be presented as an authentic representation of a factual situation where this creates a false impression. Nor may it be suggested without justification that a depicted person or organisation endorses a product, service or message.

5. Prohibited use

It is expressly prohibited to use Content as follows:

1. Reselling, relicensing or making it available to third parties as a standalone stock file, except for limited availability to persons carrying out work and use in end

- products in accordance with Article 3;
- Offering it as stock material or including it in a competing platform;
 - Including it in reusable templates, themes, plug-ins, asset libraries or comparable products in which the Content is made available to purchasers as reusable imagery. Delivery of a permitted end product in accordance with Article 3 is not covered by this prohibition;
 - Using it in logos, trademarks or trademark registrations;
 - Using it to train AI, machine learning or other datasets;
 - Using it in political campaigns without express written permission;
 - Using it in a pornographic, discriminatory, defamatory or misleading context;
 - Using it in a way that creates a false impression of the current state of a location or situation;
 - Using it in breach of applicable laws or regulations;
 - Automated collection, scraping or harvesting of Content, metadata, Contributor profiles or platform information;
 - Using Content for computer vision, geolocation analysis, mapping datasets or autonomous systems without written permission;
 - Using it for synthetic environment generation, geospatial reconstruction, digital twins or comparable AI or simulation systems without written permission.

The standard licence does not permit the above prohibited applications involving AI training, datasets, geolocation analysis, mapping and simulation. Normal use of the Platform's search, map and location features is not covered by these prohibitions. Ordinary editing remains permitted within Article 4. Different use requires an express written arrangement with DroneStock and the necessary rights.

6. Property and location use

Content must not:

- be used as the sole factual source for property transactions, tenders or investment decisions;
- create a false impression of permit status, ownership or the current condition of a location.

DroneStock does not guarantee that the circumstances in which Content was created remain current.

7. Editorial Content

A restriction to editorial use only must be clearly stated with the relevant Content before purchase. An editorial selection or quality badge, such as DroneStock Pick, does not in itself mean that the Licence is restricted to editorial use.

If Content is expressly identified before purchase as "editorial use only":

- only informational or journalistic use is permitted;
- commercial promotional use is not permitted.

8. Model and property releases

DroneStock does not guarantee that model or property releases are available for all Content unless expressly stated.

The Customer remains responsible for the lawfulness of the chosen context of use and any additional permissions required for it, for example because of portrait rights, privacy or other third-party rights.

This responsibility does not prejudice the agreed rights of use, express commitments in the offering or DroneStock's statutory obligations.

9. Moral rights

The creator's moral rights continue to apply to the extent that they have not been validly restricted or waived. DroneStock does not waive another creator's moral rights on their behalf solely through these Licence Terms.

Permission for editing under Article 4 does not authorise alterations or use contrary to the creator's moral rights, including modifications that could harm the creator's honour or reputation.

10. Warranties and exclusions

DroneStock delivers Content in accordance with the offering and the applicable Licence. The properties of the sales file stated at purchase remain decisive.

Unless expressly agreed otherwise, DroneStock does not guarantee that Content is suitable for every specific purpose, that depicted circumstances remain current or that no additional permission is required for every context of use.

An assessment by DroneStock does not in itself guarantee that all circumstances of the original drone flight have been investigated or that every conceivable use is lawful. Article 8 applies to additional rights and permissions.

These provisions do not limit mandatory statutory rights, including Consumers' statutory rights where delivered Content does not conform to the agreement. The General Terms and Conditions also apply to delivery, complaints and any remedies.

11. Checks and enforcement

Where misuse is reasonably suspected, DroneStock may ask the Customer for information to verify compliance with these Licence Terms.

In the event of an established breach, DroneStock may take measures in accordance with the General Terms and Conditions and applicable law. Article 12 applies to termination of a Licence.

Restricting or terminating access to an account does not in itself terminate all Licences previously and validly granted.

12. Revocation of the Licence

DroneStock may terminate the relevant Licence in the event of a material breach of these Licence Terms, fraudulent use or use beyond the granted right of use, subject to applicable law.

Where remedy is possible and reasonable, DroneStock gives the Customer written opportunity to remedy the breach within a reasonable period. In the event of a serious infringement or a situation in which remedy cannot reasonably be awaited, immediate termination may take place to the extent legally permitted. DroneStock informs the Customer of the termination and the reasons for it.

Following legally valid termination, the Customer ceases using the relevant Content and removes the copies used for it from active systems and managed cloud environments. The Customer takes the measures reasonably required in relation to publications and end products under their control and informs the persons carrying out work and End Customers concerned to the extent necessary for compliance.

There is no general exception for materials already published. The consequences for existing publications and End Customers' rights are determined by the ground for termination, the applicable arrangements and the law.

Removal of Content from the Platform, termination of the Creator account or a dispute between DroneStock and the creator does not in itself terminate a Licence previously and validly granted to the Customer.

13. Liability

The liability provisions in the General Terms and Conditions apply to liability in connection with this Licence. The restrictions and exceptions stated there also apply here.

No provision of these Licence Terms excludes liability or statutory rights to the extent that applicable mandatory law does not permit it.

14. Termination or transfer of the Platform

Termination, sale or a legally valid transfer of the Platform does not in itself terminate or extend Licences previously and validly granted. Existing rights of use continue within their original limits, subject to legally valid termination in accordance with Article 12.

The validity of the Licence is separate from the availability of the Platform, download links or a repeat-download service. The Customer is advised to securely retain the delivered file and proof of licence.

Termination or transfer of the Platform does not in itself entitle the Customer to a refund for Content already correctly delivered. Statutory rights and claims arising from non-delivery, defective delivery or other failures to perform remain unaffected.

The General Terms and Conditions and applicable law govern transfer of the legal relationship with the Customer.

15. Export and sanctions legislation

The Customer declares that Content will not be used in breach of applicable export, sanctions or trade legislation.

16. Governing law

These Licence Terms are governed exclusively by Dutch law.

Disputes are handled in accordance with the General Terms and Conditions.

17. Language versions

This document was drafted in Dutch and translated into English. In the event of differences between the language versions, the Dutch text prevails to the extent permitted by mandatory law. This provision does not restrict consumers' mandatory statutory rights.
